BIG CONTESTS IN EAST SCHEDULED FOR PLAY TODAY

Harvard and Princeton in Big Game Which Has Bearing on Championship - Penn and Dartmouth at Philadelphia.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. - Football games which will have a decided bearing on the ultimate ranking of eastern college elevens are scheduled for Saturday afternoon. These contests mark the passing of the preliminary season. They will oring together several of the leading elevens of the section which have to date triumphed in every game. The feature games of the day bring together Harvard and Princeton at Princeton and Pennsylavnia and Dartmouth at Philadelphia, although several of the other big varsity combinations face oppenents who should prove dangerous. The Harvard squad, more than 30 strong, spent the night before the game in this city and will move on to Princeton early Saturday morning. At their temprorary headquarters it was said that every member of the first string combination except S. Kaker was in perfect condition and that while the coaches were not over confident they looked forward to victory by a small score. This appeared to be logical, if conservative assertion, since the crimson team is conceded to be the strongest eleven in the east

Harvard's Defense Work. Experts who delight in analysis of each contest have pointed out that Harvard's defense is weak as compared to the offense, which may be one of the six teams that have faced the crimson to date has been able to score a touchdown against the varsity team by straight football,

In Princeton, however, a team well grounded in the rudiments of football will be faced and the full power of the Harvard team will be tested. Although lacking the versatile attack of the crimson, the Tiger aggregation is both fast and strong and has improved and broadened its play since Tiger Line Stronger.

Considered as a whole, the Princeton line should be able to hold the crimson forwards in check, but the Harvard backfield is expected to prove faster and more dangerous. If Law is at his best he should be able to hold his own in punting with either At Franklin field, where Pennsyl-
